During the unforgettable week that we passed in Switzerland, we have learnt how important not just acquiring the knowledge and the consequences of the workshops but bringing it back to our hometown and to our life too.

We intended to introduce the opinion of teenagers in the video as we are the generation of the future. Firstly, we interviewed people about a recent question of Europe which is about the migrants. We had to experience that young people are really well informed about that topic although they only hear about it by the media. In connection with assimilation everybody has the same ideas which contain a huge amount of empathy to live together in peace.

One of the asked people told globalisation would be an ideal solution for a lot of conflicts concerning cultures.

We also asked them about discrimination especially about the discrimination among men and women. Some people expressed their satisfaction about the situation and the average salary of women but the others think it could be much better. They described discrimination in their own words but almost everyone had the same answer: discrimination is being distinguished by someone's race, gender, sexuality and so on. We have to be really careful and adaptable as it can happen really easily in everyday life.

The last questions were about the future: the next 5-10 years of these teens will determine their whole life so it is important to visualise it in advance. Some of us would like to go on higher education abroad but there are people who imagine their life in Hungary too.
All in all, we can say that we seem to improve as we tend to be more optimistic about our future that Hungary will do better in the long run. It is not impossible to carry our ideas out and sustain the positive results.
